The General Assembly-

-will meet to-day in the capitol and commence the business of legislation. We wish they were, in a physical sense, surrounded by better circumstances; but, all things considered, we should be gratified that these are so good. The State has suffered in all respects. Yet, we feel a sincere pride in saying that whatever objections may be alleged concerning the character and measures of the Legislature, in the long run its proceedings have tended to conservatism-to the protection of the State from the causes existing in the body itself from the many things which, under the abominable "reconstruction laws" of the Federal Government, have threatened the State with the worst evils. Of this, indeed, we may be proud. It is a striking proof of that judicious, calm, and resolute public character which has ever distinguished the people of Virginia. With all their trials, with all their disasters, and with the laws of Congress weighing them down into the dust and almost into utter ruin, they have preserved order and saved the Commonwealth.

This has been the achievement of a people who have no superior on the globe. It is an example of patient fortitude and constancy, of undying hope and perseverance, unsurpassed. It is a history of prolonged and of the recent Democratic victories, faithful resistance to a war upon civilization that is unconquerable; that must triumph and end in rerevolutionizing the land and elevating civilization to its place as ruler and as the guide to that incomparable dignity and power which will ultimately distinguish this nation.

The recent overwhelming defeat of the on the country shows how patience and perseverance must finally triumph. In the light ture will find the cause of brightest hopes. for their State. It will animate them, we are sure, to deliberate with increased zeal; the peaceful revolution now clearly begun which promises to roll on until the country is restored to harmony and the States to equality.

We expressed above the wish that circumstances were better; but we congratulated to do to finish it. The people are, all things to the Baltimore Gazette. considered, wonderfully well off. The pressure growing out of the panic of last year is not yet over, and business and industry of all sorts yet feel its weight. But we can say with truth that no State has gotten along and passed through the trial better than Vir-

Therefore the Legislature-the representadespondency, and should in no respect do anything that might dampen the public spirit or throw a momentary gloom over the future. People who have stood such tests must be destined for a bright future-that brightness of peace and prosperity which providentially never fails to reward the heroic labors of a wise, and virtuous, and brave people.

Water and Rail.

The rivers are the tutelar deities of the land. They dispense their beneficence with more than lordly dignity and entire impartiality. In their course they bless many countries, and the recipients of their bounties may be numbered by millions.

Rivers are not bound or circumscribed by local lines. They wander their own way irrespective of them, but doing good to all. Therefore, rivers are citizens of the worldnot the property of one division of a State, the Supreme Court in a few months. Under or even of a State, but all upon their shores the law of Congress, Justice Swayne, if he are sharers in their advantages.

They are, therefore, the subjects of care of many. In this country, where they wash the Court bench to President Grant. This great scheme is marked out by the must be left to their course. It cannot be argued that their improvement is a work of partiality or one that could be left to individuals. The rights of the people in the great water-lines must, if possible, be forever preserved. When it comes to building railroads, we see a very different state of things. The land is already liberally supplied with them, and when it is asked that the Government the country will agree to permit the Govof enterprise. Shall the Government destroy the property governments have induced individuals to build?

Then, Government must select the termini of its roads, and give preference to one community over another. This partiality would be harsh, and might be most injurious with respect to all the considerations which should govern the decision.

Then, again, after the Government builds its railroad it would most probably be dread-

War in the Pennsylvania Mines. SECOND BUENA VISTA-ITALIANS AND OLD

MINERS IN DEADLY STRIFE. Upwards of two months ago there was strike among the laborers at Armstrong's mines, at Buena Vista, Allegheny county Pa. The proprietor at once replaced the strikers, to the number of one hundred and seventy-five, by Italian laborers who were brought from New York and Philadelphia. shall build additional railways we wonder if The employment of these men was the cause of great indignation among the strikers, ernment to become a competitor in that sort Italians with pistols and muskets for selfwhen it was found necessary to arm the protection.

On Sunday firing commenced and became general, the Italians occupying the bank of Youghioheny river on the Allegheny side, and the strikers or discharged miners the north, or Buena Vista, side of the river.

THE FIGHT.

About 9 o'clock Sunday morning thirty armed Italians boarded a large flat and started to cross the river to Buena Vista, their errand, the citizens claim, being manifestly hostile. As soon as they got to the bank of the river they proceeded toward the fully managed, and do injury rather than village. Suddenly a heavy volley of musberefit to those for whose good it was in- ketry was discharged by the invaders, and the Buena Vista folk became alarmed. Womainder sent to Shaner's formately. Durin this light a couple of Italians were wounded but not seriously. THE BATTLE RENEWED. Abou' 4 o'clock the battle was ren-

This time it was fearfully in earnest. Voilley after volley of musketry was discharged. The Italians had come out of their quarters on the bank of the river, and in ditches, improvised as breastworks, hid themselves, and on the Allegheny countyside a large force had collected, numbering, probably, two bundred and fifty men, who made a brisk reply to the foreigners. Fighting now went on vigorously, each, side doing its best to dislodge the other. One of the Italians, named Ambrose Millano, was shot through the head and almost instantly killed. The fire grew botter, no effort being made for a cessation of hostilities, as both parties were bitterly excited. The Italians had but seventy-five armed men, while the forces of the opposition were rapidly augmenting. During the fusilade skiffs were brought into ervice, and a force sent across from Buens Vista to surround the foreigners, if possible, and thus compel them to surrender.

SURBOUNDED -A FLAG OF TRUCE. About one hundred men were thus sen ver, and they succeeded in outflanking the talians, who had no suspicion of what was joing on below them, being too much en raged at the front. The flanking force landed safely, and before the Italians were aware of it they were surrounded on all sides, with very little chance of escape. They, however, fought on until three more of their comrades fell fatally wounded, shot through the back and bowels with Mine bullets. Three others were rendered helpless by wounds in the knees, leus, and thighs. Guscetti, the leader of the Italians, with his nephew and wife, now came out with a white towel hung on a stick as a flag of truce. Hostilities ceased soon after, and then Guscetti appeared and spoke to the delegates from the other side, who demanded an immediate and unconditional surrender, including arms. Guscetti refused to surrender the arms to any body outside of the regular State militis, and he stated that as his men had no more ammunition than their guns were loaded with he would not part with the only protection they possessed in case of an emergercy. He would hold himself responsible that no more firing would be done. His men were surrounded, with very little chance of escape, and it was not likely they would make any attempt to fight if unmolested.

After this parley skirmisming began again from the other side of the river, which was not responded to by the Italians. The towel, as a flag of truce, had been fastened to a pole and stuck into the ground, but did not seem to meet with respect. The Italians now hoisted a sheet on top of the house, which caused the firing entirely to cease, which caused the firing entirely to cease when fresh negotiations for permanent peace ensued. This time it proved successful, and no more firing was done.

ALSACE AND LORRAINE IN THE GERMAN REICHSTAG-VIGOROUS SPEECH BY PRINCE BISMARCK .- Berlin, November 30 .-- In the Reichstag to-day the Alsace and Lorraine loan bill was taken up, and gave rise to a most interesting debate. The Deputies from Alsace and Lorraine took occasion in the 1874, at 6 P. M course of the discussion to declare that they were opposed to the high endownment of the University of Strasburg and to other educational grants for the provinces because bey were made in the interest of the Empire, and not of the provinces themselves. Prince Bismarck replied as follows : " The question before us concerns Imperial intersts. It is not a question of Alsace and

My own views respecting the ment, which at first were too sanguine, have been modified since I became acquainted with the attitude of the Deputies from those provinces.

Such a Parliament will lead to continual agitation, and perhaps might endanger the peace of the Empire. We shall doubtless be obliged to take more serious steps in regard to school matters there. We cannot permit the existence of elements which strive to Imperial interests. "I shall not be frightened from my course by reproaches, threats, or persuasions. Before advance is possible we must be convinced of the existence of trustworthy elements. We may expect a better discernment in the rising generation, and must, therefore, see that good schools are provided

At the conclusion of the debate the loan bill was referred to a committee.

ACCIDENT TO A SON OF GOVERNOR PEIR-POINT .- [From the Fairmont Virginian.]-On last Saturday evening Master Willie Peirpoint, younger son of Governor F. H. Peirpoint, was moulding some bullets preparatory to a season of sport, we suppose, when the mould becoming heated he dipped it in water for the purpose of cooling, and not knowing or thinking what might be the result if the water was not entirely all out of the mould, commenced operations again. It is quite evident that it did contain a little of the transparent fluid, for no sooner did he pour in the melted lead than out it flew, striking him in the left eye and burning him severely. His eyebrow was singed considerably and a hole was burned through the eyelid; but the ball of the eye was only slightly injured. The burn was a dangerous and painful one, and it was a very narrow escape from losing his eye.
